Artist's Statement

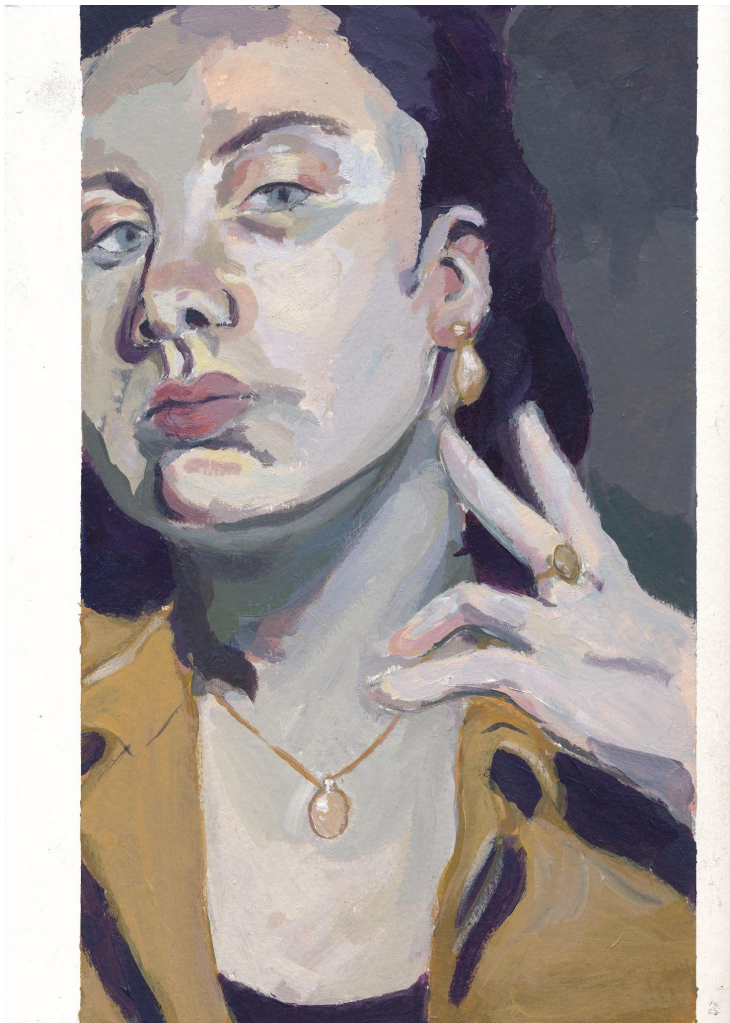

My work this year was focused on memory, and how memory changes and shifts over time. Memory is such a core part of how we define ourselves, and yet it is constantly shifting and evolving; everytime story is retold, a past moment revisited, our own perceptions of our past shift and change. I worked with my own memories and perceptions of the past in much of my work, but I also experimented with narrative and storytelling. I both aimed to preserve memories that I have now, as well as explore the act of forgetting and reinventing the past. I also played with tone and mood, aiming to capture the bittersweet feeling of memories changing and growing alongside us.
