

Artist Statement:

Throughout 2020 I came to a lot of realizations about identity through myself and others. COVID-19 gave the entire world a lot of time to themselves to think and explore one's personal identity. I explored many different mediums that were out of my comfort zone to amplify the idea that “identity” can be uncomfortable. I merged different processes by reconstructing traditional mediums to showcase my unique style. Through this experience I found the beauty in being uncomfortable and how to find comfort within the discomfort. I investigated movement and repetition through my compositions and pattern work. My goal with this series was to create a visual representation of consciousness, to make the viewer feel understood. Through my pieces I showcased my personal identity as well as how the world has shifted and changed my perception on myself throughout this past year.
